DETAILED OFFICE ACTION

Response to Amendment

The Amendment does not overcome the previous §102 prior rejection. Regarding the independent claims: First, the term "small" is relative term to which the Applicant does not provide any standard for comparison. The Examiner is interpreting this language as having music modules of two sizes (i.e., one smaller, or "small-scale"). Certainly, all cited references would support modules of two sizes (and certainly, one of ordinary skill in the art would think to support modules of different sizes). Second, the phrase "hierarchical frame" (i.e., as defined by Applicant "a frame within a frame;" page 23) appears to be shown in the cited art. For example, both Lauts and Battle show a main support and smaller supports supported by the main support (i.e., a frame within a frame), e.g., see Battle fig. 1, main support (14; the frame) and smaller support (24) supported by the main support. Lauts also shows a main support with smaller supports to secure the keyboards (un-numbered but shown in the figures). Similarly in Adinolfi, main supports (10 and 13) and individual drum supports (not shown, but must be inherent, otherwise drums could not be secured to the cross beam (13).

Therefore, all claims remain under Final Rejection.
